

Build Green Connecticut™

Build Green Connecticut™ (BGC) is a program that offers builders, consumers, and policymakers information and resources to help facilitate the construction of green and sustainable housing. The centerpiece of BGC is NAHB's National Green Building Standard™, the first and only ANSI-certified green building standard in the U.S. BGC was one of the first programs in the nation to formally affiliate with NAHB's green building program.

What We Offer Builders and Developers:

- Education on how to build and sell greener homes;
- A certification process to verify that the homes you build are green;
- Certified Green Professional - An NAHB designation that tells consumers you have the knowledge and expertise to build their green home;
- An active network of industry professionals interested in green residential development and construction.

What We Offer Consumers:

- Education on what green building is and things to consider when building green;
- A list of professional builders and remodelers who are building green in Connecticut;
- Resources to help sort through the overwhelming information available.

What We Offer Policymakers:

- Expertise and a "one-stop shop" on issues related to residential green building;
- Direction and feedback on policy.
