Debbie Vadas Levison's life has two parts: the first in Ontario, Canada, where she grew up, and the second in Connecticut, USA, where she has lived for the past twenty years. Both places feel like home, and in both she has been lucky enough to pursue her passion: story-telling.

Back in Toronto, she attended the Royal Conservatory of Music and the University of Toronto. Debbie penned the travel column for a national newspaper before working in public relations, liaising with press, foreign diplomats, corporate investors and the public.

Since relocating to Connecticut, she has been published in local, regional and national media, both as a director at a leading communications firm and as a freelance writer, earning an Award of Excellence from the Society of Professional Journalists. Debbie is involved with many charitable projects throughout the community, for which she is proud to have received the prestigious A. O. Samuels Young Leadership Award.

THE CRATE: A Story of War, a Murder, and Justice is a life-long dream come true.
